

John A. Beale Memorial Award

PURPOSE:

To recognize outstanding efforts over a sustained period of time by an SAF member in the promotion of forestry through voluntary service to the Society.

INFORMATION ON JOHN A. BEALE:

John Beale's name is synonymous with words like service and leadership. Before his untimely death in 1976 he played a major role in shaping the future direction of SAF.

Beale's diverse background lent itself well to positions of leadership in the Society. Born in Illinois in 1919, he received a bachelor's degree in forestry from Michigan State, and went on to receive a master's from Harvard. During World War II, Beale served in the army and received a Purple Heart in the Italian Peninsula Campaign. After the war, Beale began working for Wisconsin's Department of Natural Resources and was promoted to Chief Forester in 1954. In 1968 he was selected to become the Deputy Secretary to the state's Conservation Administration where he remained until his death.

Beale is best known for his eight years of national elected service (1968-1976), in which he served as Council member, Vice-President, and President. Beale was at the forefront of SAF policy formulation as a member of the SAF's Forest Policy Committee, a committee he went on to chair in 1976.
